Says Washington Pitcher Pitched Best Game for That Club Last Year.

A Philadelphia newspaper recently printed the following story:
"It would naturally be supposed that when any one referred to the best pitched game by any Washington pitcher last season, the name of Walter Johnson would be mentioned, because of his wonderful prowess. His name would suggest itself the minute the subject was broached, and yet not less an authority than Connie Mack made the assertion that the best pitched game he witnessed last season was delivered by Long Tom Hughes, Mack referred to the game which Hughes pitched against his team in Philadelphia after 17 straight had been won, and Hughes was slated to bring home the 18th. He apparently had the game clinched in the ninth inning, when, with the score 10 to 6, in favor of the Nationals, two men out and none on the bases, two and two on Baker, the Athletics' greatest slugger drove the ball over the right field fence for a home run, and in the following inning Mack's team won."

"I have seen a lot of great games pitched in my time," said Mack, "but I don't recall a more brilliant exhibition than Hughes produced when he pitched that game. I saw him when he pitched it, and I did not feel elated over the victory, for that sort of pitching deserves a victory. Hughes used better judgment than I have seen in a long time. He virtually had my team eating out of his hand, and it was the hardest kind of luck to lose the game as he lost that one."

WESLEYAN'S BASEBALL SCHEDULE

Approved by Athletic Council—Schedule of Nineteen Games
Opens at Yale April 12—Practice Starts Next Week—
Noonan Again to Coach Nine.

Wesleyan's program of baseball for this season has been approved by the Athletic Council. The official schedule as presented by Manager Rodney Lagren, '13, of Elizabeth, N. J., contains nineteen games and is a much stronger schedule than last season's. The new teams this season are Columbia university, Lafayette college, Tufts, and a four year contract with Amherst college has been agreed upon. The manager was unable to "book" games with Middlebury college, University of Maine, and New York university, who were on last season's schedule. P. Noonan, formerly of St. Louis National league team, will coach again this season. Captain Wright, of New York, will call the candidates for first practice the early part of next week.

The schedule for 1913:
April 12, Yale at New Haven; April 18, Brown at Providence, R. I.; April 18, Bowdoin at Middlebury; April 19, Rutgers at New Brunswick; April 20, Amherst at Amherst, Mass.; April 20, Springfield Training school, at Middletown; May 3, Williams, at Middletown; May 3, Lafayette at Middletown; May 10, Tufts at Middletown; May 10, Trinity at Hartford, Conn.; May 14, Columbia at New York; May 15, Norwich university at Middletown; May 17, open; May 21, Holy Cross at Worcester, Mass.; May 24, Trinity at Hartford; May 29, Trinity at Middletown; May 31, Fordham at Middletown; June 14, Williams at Williamstown, Mass.; June 17, Alumni, at Middletown.

Indoor Football Training.
Princeton, N. J., Feb. 25.—Preparations for the 1913 football season were begun actively here today when 35 candidates reported in the gymnasium and were given an initial workout. Practice will be held three times a week for the remainder of the college year. Thomas Wilson, line coach during the past season and Arthur Blumenthal, the variety center for the past three seasons, directed the work. The practice will be held on University field as soon as the weather permits.

The other two teams tied for eighth place with 1120.

High School Team Sets New Record.
Portland, Me., Feb. 25.—Scoring 973 out of a possible 1000, the Deering

NICKNAMES OF CLUBS.
Some Are Short Lived, While Others Have Stuck to Teams.

Nicknames have been a part of professional baseball ever since the game was put on an organized basis, and Frank Chance's notion to bestow the name, New York, on the New York Americans marks a departure. The meaningless Yankees, sometimes referred to the club, always was without rhyme or reason, and Highlanders doesn't fit any more. One of the oldest pseudonyms is Giants, which the New York Nationals have carried since the 80s. The title was bestowed at the time because of their size, and has stuck, says the New York Sun. Nicknames springing from the color of the stockings have been accepted readily by the rosters, such as Reds for Cincinnati, Browns for St. Louis, Cardinals for the St. Louis Nationals, White Sox for the Chicago Americans and Red Sox for the Boston Americans.

The Sox part of it originated in Chicago and was copied in Boston. It makes a terse and satisfactory appellation. There have been Browns in St. Louis ever since the Comiskey period there, and brown is distinctly suggestive of St. Louis. The Cleveland have been called the Blues as well as the Naps, and back in the Tebeau regime they were known as the Spiders.

One of the oldest nicknames was Beaneaters. Successively the Bostonians became Doves, Braves, Wardens and Rustlers, but none of these names has been accepted as the name of the club. The Bostonians were called the Orphans, being called that when Anson left them. Later they were the Colts, and there was a time when the Brooklynians were known as Bridgeporters. But the name that has stuck is the Philadelphia Nationals, the genesis of which is obvious. The dignified title, Athletics, has been part and parcel of the Philadelphia Americans ever since they existed, but the same term was used back in the days of Harry Stovey and his associates.

But for the real picturesque nicknames go to the minors. Once upon a time they were Cowboys in Kansas City, the title being dropped for the more prosaic one of Blues. Baltimore has one of the best, one of the most distinctive and poetic nicknames—the Orioles. And this is true. Cuppy, the pitcher of the Boston Americans, "The only improvement I can see in the game is 'Ty Cobb,'" says Cuppy. "Otherwise it is no faster than in the 90s. Ty Cobb is the greatest player the game ever produced. Cuppy pays his partner honor as the greatest pitcher of all time. No one knew better than Cuppy what Ty Cobb was capable of, and Nicknamed the only ball player to name the leading citizen of Peoli, Mo., as best of all the pitchers."

CUPPY DEFENDS HIMSELF.
Old Cleveland Pitcher Claims He Was No Slower Than Present Pitchers.

Many wives in major league cities breathed sighs of relief one day in 1901, when it was announced that Cuppy had made his exit from the big leagues. Not that the women disliked Cuppy, but where is the woman who wants to keep supper warm after it is ready, while hubby makes his way home from the ball game? Cuppy was in the big league when dinner was served at noon, and only in our most exclusive little circles had it displaced "supper" as the evening repast.

Orville J. Cuppy is the proprietor of a billiard hall in Elkhart, Ind. He is 43, a native of Eaton, O., has a larger following in Elkhart than in the '90s, and looks prosperous. Cuppy was painfully slow in the box that because of the frequency of his strikes, he was called "The Old Man." Cuppy was in the big league when dinner was served at noon, and only in our most exclusive little circles had it displaced "supper" as the evening repast.

Cuppy now objects to being called a "slow pitcher," and declares he was no slower than the average. He says: "I see they are now getting away with pitching 150 balls a game. When I was in the business I used to pitch that many to four Orioles, McGraw, Jennings, Keeler and Kelley. I was called slow, but I was not. I was called slow because I was slow and had a lot of time to think. I was slow and had a lot of time to think. I was slow and had a lot of time to think."

SAFE AND INTERESTING.
Parke Davis Satisfied With Football of the Present.

In speaking of the results of the meeting of the intercollegiate football rules committee, Parke H. Davis of Princeton says:
"The work of the committee, measured by many propositions defeated, as well as by the few proposals adopted, represents a realization on the part of the members that after years of experimenting we at last have devised an evenly balanced, safe and healthy, interesting game. The refusal of the committee to adopt several meritorious changes offered was due to a desire to keep the game as it is and to the fear to experiment further in the novelty, however attractive. The proposal to compel players to be numbered apparently has been made two years in advance of the time. Under the ruling of the committee teams may number their players if they choose. It is safe to predict that many of the teams in 1913 will do so."

"All of the changes made by the committee were practically unimportant, and there is no doubt whatever about their effects. It is unfortunate that the committee could not agree upon a remedy for a dangerous and pass. Under the present rules the penalty for an incomplete forward pass, or a pass caught within five yards of the line, is the loss of the down, the ball returning to the point where it was put in play. Under the new rule, a player who, on a running play or on a kick, is about to be tackled for a loss, and who has the ball forward deliberately on to the ground, thereby converting his play into an incomplete forward pass, and by gaining the advantage of the penalty regain his lost ground. In other words, here is a penalty that cunning can convert into premium."

"The committee realized this anomalous condition, but believed that owing to the infrequency of its occurrence, it was less to be feared than any remedy so far suggested which might disorganize the present balance of the game. The matter, therefore, has been left to the thrashing of one of our more serious. On the whole, football is not far now from that perfection as a sport which is enjoyed by its comrades, baseball. The defects are only slight, and close to solution."
